ABOUT ASTD

ASTD (American Society for Training & Development) is the world's largest association dedicated to workplace learning and performance professionals. ASTD's 70,000 members and associates come from more than 100 countries and thousands of organizations--multinational corporations, medium-sized and small businesses, government, academia, consulting firms, and product and service suppliers.

ASTD marks its beginning in 1944 when the organization held its first annual conference. In recent years, ASTD has widened the industry's focus to connect learning and performance to measurable results, and is a sought-after voice on critical public policy issues.

independence in 1991, and the imperfections and ambiguities of the Moscow-directed approach of divide et impera (divide and conquer) remain as well. A clear example of such ambiguity is the presence of large minorities of Uzbeks in northern Tajikistan and western Kyrgyzstan, as well as Uzbekistan's control of Samarkand and Bukhara, both historically Tajik cities. Particularly in the latter case, ethnic distinctions were blurred by centuries of cohabitation and the fact that many, if not most, residents were bilingual and were themselves viewed by outsiders as a distinct group, the Sarts. The boundaries imposed during Soviet administration therefore do not precisely correspond to the actual ethnic geography of Central Asia, leaving open the possibility of irredentism and related political conflict. Indeed, border issues in the region have been the source of some friction in recent years between Uzbekistan and Kazakhstan, and two Uzbek enclaves remain entirely inside Kyrgyz territory, Sokh and Shakhmardan. The latter were created during the Soviet era and are officially part of Fergana viloyat.

Population Characteristics

Ethnic and Religious Geography

Uzbekistan is a multiethnic state, with close to 100 distinct ethnic groups residing in the country. The largest group are the ethnic Uzbeks, who make up slightly more than 70 percent of the population. The Uzbeks are fundamentally of Turkic stock, but many ethnic strains may be detected among them, the result of a history of intrusion of progressive waves of invaders and settlers from all points of the compass, but especially from the Eurasian steppe lands. Traditional Uzbek society is subdivided into clan and tribal affiliations, which although weakened during the Soviet period nevertheless continue to influence political and economic relationships.
